

Elegy

composed by CROBA A. PYIRNHA

typeset by Neil Jackson

Note:

This piece consists of an A part (14 measures long) and a B part (26 measures long), which are repeated several times with varying lyrics. The playing order is ABAABAABA. In order to relieve the player from the burden of keeping track of this pattern while playing, I have unfolded the repeats into one long score that can be played straight through.

Translation:

Margot, labor at the vine soon. As I passed through the Lorraine, I chanced upon three capitaines, and they called me country-bred. But I'm not that country-bred. Since the King's son loves me dear, he brought a present to me: a big spray of marjoram. If it blooms I will be Queen. Should it die, I've lost my time.

Andante comodo.

soprano

alto

tenor

bass

